ADVERTISEMENT.

THE great variety of Provincial Copper Coins issued between the years 1787 and 1794 induced many people to make collections of them; still more attempted to obtain a complete series: but failing in the attempt, I thought a representation of them engraved on Copper-plates would serve as a substitute. It was at first my intention to keep each workman's productions by themselves; the Coins on the first three plates being all executed by one person: but when I attempted to select from my collection for the succeeding plates, I found it impracticable to pursue that method, I therefore afterwards placed them promiscuously; still continuing to arrange the Coins on each plate according to the workmanship, those that are best executed being as near as possible kept by themselves on separate plates. Towards the latter end of the year 1794, and the beginning of 1795, it became quite a trade to manufacture them, and prodigious quantities were issued, some payable, others not payable; and the greater part of those that were best executed was counterfeited, and the obverses and reverses so mixed, that it was almost impossible to distinguish which were originals: and lately dies have been executed for the sole purpose of furnishing the collectors, the productions* not being intended for circulation; indeed many of them are so infamously base, that, in my opinion, they are a disgrace to the age we live in, and such as I don't think proper to admit into my collection. Others are issued that are better executed, some of which I have not been able to obtain; although I must, with gratitude, acknowledge the politeness of Miss Banks, Soho-square, in furnishing me with several that, in all probability, I could not otherways have procured.

In the index I have, as far as I could obtain information, given the names of the Die-sinkers; and where no name is expressed I have not been able to learn it.

Charles Pye.

Birmingham, Sept. 1, 1795.

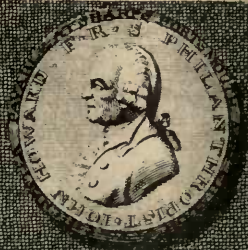

* Dudley, Brighton, and several others, were not even known to be in existence at the respective towns from whence they derive their names.
